

Skepticism as a Form of Philosophical Experience

A Conference at the University of Chicago
February 3rd – 5th 2017

The Franke Institute for the Humanities
1100 E 57th St

Co-Organized by:
Jason Bridges
James Conant
Rico Gutschmidt

Friday, February 3

10:15-12:15

Arata Hamawaki

(Auburn University)

“The Plan, the Philosophical, and the First Person Self-Relation”

2:00-4:00

Jean-Philippe Narboux

(University of Bordeaux)

“Skepticism and the Aesthetics of Modernism”

4:30-6:30

Michael Williams

(Johns Hopkins University)

“Wittgenstein and Skepticism”

Saturday, February 4

10:00-12:00

Jason Bridges

(University of Chicago)

“Skepticism and Beyond”

2:00-4:00

Eli Friedlander

(Tel Aviv University)

“On Skepticism and the Unquestionable in Wittgenstein’s Tractatus”

4:30-6:30

Andrea Kern

(University of Leipzig)

“Skepticism and the Role of the Second Person”

Sunday, February 5

10:00-12:00

Jean-Luc Marion

(University of Chicago)

“Negative Certainties”

2:00-4:00

Paul Franks

(Yale University)

“Can We Live Our Anti-Skepticism?”

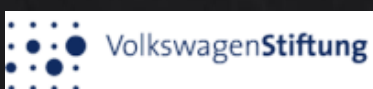

4:30-6:30

Barry Stroud

(Berkeley)

“Learning from Skepticism”

Papers will be pre-circulated, and will not be read at the conference
To access the papers, contact Ryan Simonelli (simonelli@uchicago.edu)
Full conference information at skepticism-and-experience.blogspot.com

Persons with disabilities who need accommodations in order to participate should contact The Franke Institute at franke-humanities@uchicago.edu or 773-702-8274

THE FRANKE
INSTITUTE